Its beyond heartbreaking. (and of course has absolutely nothing to do with her race, other than some of you may remember the initial story) http://anickelsworthofcommonsense.blogspot.com/

Its a public tragedy associated with the China Adoption community plus an ongoing story that started a few years ago that many people advocated for and on behalf of this woman. I mean its horrifying, but also real. And I do think that aparents of older children NEED to be aware of how difficult things can be, the ESSENTIAL need for support post adoption, and certainly NOONE thinks they are ever going to kill a child they adopted, but sadly, tragically, disgustingly, it has happened WAY too many times, particularly with older child adoptees. Families need to be PREPARED and need SUPPORT ... then maybe these poor kids wouldnt be facing a 15% post adoption disruption rate, or like sweet Lavender, worse. http://anickelsworthofcommonsense.blogspot.com/

Oh my, I remember this very well. My heart sank when I read the article- that's just awful. I think she posted about this on the China singles' yahoo group (during the time she'd been denied).

I don't remember anything about the past story of her being denied. Why was she denied?

Joy

The director of her orphanage refused to let the child go with her when she realized mom was black. Created a HUGE uproar.

The other case in which the post was deleted was a little too close for comfort for some.

Re: Remember the AA woman denied her adoption, who won eventual

This has been posted by the directors of her agency on a few public boards ...

Quote:

This is a very difficult post to write. Dick and I were notified of Lavender's death within a couple of weeks after it occurred. We have been communicating with the police department there since that time, but were told not to discuss the matter with anyone until charges had been placed. It has been a long, long period of mourning with no one to share the heartbreak but the two of us. Now that we are able to talk about it, we are finding it very difficult to do so.

For those who are questioning our decision to place a child with Sabrina; there was absolutely nothing in her home study that raised any red flags at all. We are not, of course, going to share any details of her home study with anyone, but suffice to say it was perfectly fine.

Sabrina had received PA from the CCAA for Lavender. It was not until the CCAA read her file and discovered she was African-American that she was denied. Yes...this was the reason. Yes...this is the truth. And yes, when she was finally approved, our SN program there was taken away. But none of that seems important right now.

All of the children, special needs and non-special needs, that we place are so very dear to us. Those children who are more difficult to adopt find a special place in our hearts, and remain there. And so it was with Lavender. A beautiful little one with a sweet spirit. We will never understand what could cause someone to harm a child. Their child. Any child. But the fact is this happens every day in families created by birth and through adoption. But this time, it happened to a child we knew, and loved. Our Lavender. And our hearts are broken.
